User Persona 1

I am Nancy Johnson and currently studying at the University of Colombia and I have 3.94 GPA. My major is Business and Finance. At the university, I had my first group project in which the professor gave us a task to organize a team of five by the end of class. I looked around the class and got nervous because I did not know anyone.

Due to many unknown faces, it was difficult for me to find people to team up with. I know how important it is to have a good team because your grade will suffer if the team is not contributing. I decided to team up with people who were sitting next to me and shortly after, figured out it was a mistake. I had to do all the work for the team since they did not care, and their knowledge and skills were not useful for the project.

In conclusion my first project group experience at the University was unpleasant and I wish there was a way to help me find good teammates to make a balanced team for a group project in a full class of unknown people.
